THE POMPON or BOUQUET DAHLIA

POMPONS. Without question, the most useful type of dahlia for the florist is the pompon. Blooming riotously at a time when all perennials and most annuals are past their best, yielding a bigger harvest for the amount of space used than anything else that grows, during the barren months the pompon dahlia is a Godsend and a life saver to the florist both in town and country.

The varieties now in commerce run the range of every color and every combination of shades, and their small size and great beauty fit them for any purpose the florist desires.

At the present time there are 350 varieties being grown at THE DAHLIA FARM.
